

EASY-ACCESS BRAS

Fastening a bra is a task most women do each day without giving it a second thought — a routine movement easily taken for granted. However, fastening tiny hooks and eyes can be impossible for women with dexterity problems, multiple sclerosis, torn rotator cuffs, or paralysis from a stroke.

To make dressing easier, Ohio-based maternity, full-figure and special needs intimate apparel manufacturer Leading Lady has developed the Arthritis Bra Collection. The bras have loop closures, Velcro and large trouser-style hooks eliminating the struggle with tiny clasps. The product, first patented by Canadian inventor Francine Lonn, was improved after input from focus groups. It is commended for ease of use by the Arthritis Foundation.

To view the bra, go to www.leadinglady.com. To order in Canada go to www.harlon.com.